Locations for Public Access to Technology In the Central Valley

A Partial List for FRESNO COUNTY (WEST) -- MERCED -- SAN JOAQUIN -- STANISLAUS -- SUTTER -- TULARE -- YOLO -- YUBA COUNTIES

Including a list of Civic Resources

Version 2.0

[also available online at www.greatvalley.org]

The Great Valley Center's Central Valley Digital Network is an AmeriCorps*VISTA Program of the Corporation for National Service.

This listing is sponsored by the Governor's Office of Service & Volunteerism (GO SERV)

The Central Valley Digital Network

As our society becomes increasingly information-based and knowledge-driven, opportunities for equal participation in our democracy through education, jobs, and community become skewed among socioeconomic and geographically distributed groups. The Central Valley Digital Network (CVDN) is a program of the Great Valley Center that serves to address issues of equity for and access to information technology in the region as an engine for greater economic participation and fuller access to civic life.

The Central Valley Digital Network creates real options for accessing information technology and learning new skills in a region risking isolation from participation in the New Economy. A key component of this program is directed to infusing human capital into local organizations to increase their capacity to offer training, outreach and access to technology. This occurs in the form of deploying AmeriCorps*VISTA Members into counties in the region to serve as local organizers for reaching out to and supporting members and groups in communities who have not been able to access the Information Highway for a variety of reasons. The CVDN AmeriCorps*VISTA Members conduct year-long special projects to increase opportunities for public access to and training for technology. They help to build the capacity of local organizations to reach out to the community and help to bridge the digital divide.

About This Listing

People need to know where they can go to get connected to technology especially if they do not have access to computers at home, at work or at school. The VISTAs in the Central Valley Digital Network were asked to create a network of information for the public to find out where and how to get connected. The VISTAs have produced this directory of over 150 organizations in their assigned counties (Merced, San Joaquin, Stanislaus, Sutter, Tulare, West Fresno, Yolo, and Yuba Counties) where the public can access technology. By making this information available to the community, more people can learn about where to go to get connected.

This listing is a living document and periodic updates will be made available online on the Great Valley Center website at <http://www.greatvalley.org> to include more locations and updated information. Submissions to this listing are welcomed at info@greatvalley.org.

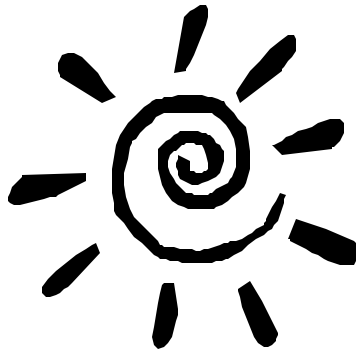

The Digital Divide

In the Central Valley, the digital divide between those who have access to information technology and those who do not constitutes a larger gap than the national average. According to a 1999 survey by the Public Policy Institute of California regarding those living in the Central Valley:

- ?? Almost two-thirds of the Hispanic population has not used the Internet or e-mail.
- ?? Middle class households are twice as likely to have a computer in their home as working class families.
- ?? Three times the number of people with college educations use a computer or the Internet compared with those who have a high school education or less.

In 2001, the Public Policy Institute of California shows that while Latinos in the state as a whole have narrowed the digital divide between themselves and non-Hispanic whites, Latinos in the Central Valley appear to have fallen further behind: A 15-point gap in Internet use in November 1999 has grown to a 28-point gap today. While the number of Latinos in the Central Valley who say they currently use the Internet (35%) is similar to the 38 percent who reported using the Internet in November 1999, the number of non-Hispanic whites reporting Internet use has increased considerably — from 53 percent in 1999 to 63 percent today. There is still work to be done to create greater digital opportunities.

Special Thanks

The Central Valley Digital Network (CVDN) would like to express appreciation to Desiree Cervantes, whose hard work made this technology listing possible.

The Central Valley Digital Network (CVDN) would also like to acknowledge the leadership that AmeriCorps*VISTA Members Joe Allen and John Alves exemplified in creating this listing and would like to honor each AmeriCorps*VISTA Members who compiled the information...
